

Biography

Doug Henders background as a US Army Cartographer is the source of his camouflage painting style that explores the ground between abstraction, representation and information layered topographies. By using the techniques of military observation in painting, Henders work plays on the connection between modernism and information gathering that officially "does not exist in the work itself". Over the past 20 years his work is has been exhibited internationally in galleries, museums, biennials, art fairs and private collections.
